Welcome to The Vine Bistro

Where French passion meets South African terroir

Located on the southern slopes of the beautiful Simonsberg Mountain and nestled between indigenous fynbos, the land was first granted to Huguenot François Villion in the early 17th, century before passing it to Johan Peter de Villiers in 1812. In 1911 the property was bought by a British family, the Garlicks, who owned it for 92 years before its purchase in 2003 by May-Eliane de Lencquesaing whom previously owned the prestigious Bordeaux chateau, Pichon Longueville Comtesse de Lalande, Pauillac Grand Cru Classé.

The 123 hectare estate currently boasts 54.5 hectares of red varieties, 5.5 of white and 5 hectares of olive groves. 2009 saw the completion of a 6,000 gravity fed wine cellar where, with the help of viticulturist Heinrich Louw, winemaker Luke O’Cuinneagain and consultant Adi Badenhorst, the grapes are lovingly crafted from vine to wine.

Corkage is R75 per 750 ml bottle

Château Pichon Longueville

The following wines have a very special place in the heart of the current owner of Glenelly, May de Lencquesaing. Château Pichon Longueville Comtesse de Lalande, or more commonly known as Chateau Pichon-Lalande, is an estate in the Pauillac appellation of Bordeaux. The story of this vineyard goes back to the 17th Century and later on, in 1855, it was classified as a 2nd growth. The Miaillhe family took over in 1925 and May (née Miaillhe) grew up there. From a young age she was immersed in the daily life of the family vineyards and when her father passed away in 1978, she was ready to take over the management of Pichon-Lalande.

Pauillac is a town and wine growing area on the left bank of Bordeaux. The soils are gravelly and very well drained. They are very suited to the four dominant varieties of Bordeaux : Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Cabernet Franc and Petit Verdot. The wines of Pichon-Lalande are known to be rather feminine, due to its location on the south of the commune, near Saint-Julien, and also because of the higher proportion of Merlot in its wines compared to its neighbours. Pauillac include 3 of the 5 premiers crus Bordeaux (Latour, Lafite and Mouton), and is often considered to be the quintessential of Bordeaux wines.

In 2006 Madame de Lencquesaing sold Pichon-Lalande to the famous Louis Roederer Champagne house. Today at 93 years old, she spends her time between Europe and South Africa, and she believes that great wines keep people young. À votre santé!"
